

Dear Sirs,

I believe that you should leave the NJ do not call list in place. It's been particularly pleasurable not to have to answer phone calls from telemarketers. My philosophy has always been if I wanted to buy something I would go looking for it myself. I don't want someone disturbing me at home trying to sell something to me. First of all I wouldn't buy anything over the phone because of all the scams that people run and usually its not something I would want or need. Yes I could always say no thanks but when they call during my dinner hour its disrupts my home life. I just find it a rude way of making money. There are other ways of marketing products. I feel bad for the people that work for these companies that have to put up with people like me who hang up on them or are rude. Sorry but if you are disturbing me in the privacy of my home that is what you get.

Thanks for listening - Haide Krygoski
